

Teamleader of Customer Laboratory (m/f)

located in Cologne for an automobile customer (OEM)

Bollig and Kemper has been a leading manufacturer of automobile serial coatings in Germany and Europe since 1919. Nippon Paint, one of the biggest coatings manufacturers in Asia, took over the Bollig and Kemper group in the course of its regional expansion in January 2016.

If you are an engineer in paint coatings and interested in developing the multifaceted product "coatings", if you like flat hierarchies as well as an independent work style, we would be glad to receive your application to become a part of our success story.

Your scope of tasks!

- Professionally leading and taking responsibility for the project team as well as accountability for personnel
- Developing coatings to meet customer specifications
- In addition to maintaining and further developing existing products in close cooperation with our customers, you will significantly be involved in the development of new products, partially at their production sites
- Responsible for the technical and customer support
- Checking raw materials concerning usability and optimization of our products
- Developing and documenting formulas and presenting them in report form

Your skills!

- Have completed a study as an engineer in paint / coatings (m/f) or a training as a lab technician with several years of work experience
- Have a profound knowledge of coating formulation (ideally waterborne systems), coating trials and applications
- Possess a profound knowledge of raw materials as well as formulation experience
- Have an engaged, proactive, independent and flexible working style
- Possess the mandatory leadership required to manage a team
- Ability and willingness to communicate efficiently
- You are familiar with general Microsoft office tools
- Good English skills are required

We offer!

- A fascinating area of accountability with a high level of self-responsibility
- A collegial working environment with mutual support
- Short communication and decision paths
- Further training offers as well as individual language courses
- National and international development opportunities
- Excellent social benefits, especially a company pension insurance

Would you like to support us in our international growth?

We would be glad to receive your application documents via email (karriere@bolligundkemper.de) including information about your salary expectations and your earliest possible entrance date.

For any kinds of questions please contact A. Zarges (telephone number: +49 221 5884 -200).